

MISCELLANEOUS.

A gentleman precedes a lady ascending a stairway and follows her descending.

At the theater or other place of amusement a gentleman precedes a lady along the aisle, both entering and departing.

When a gentleman escorts a lady home he takes his departure when the door of her residence is opened and she enters.

When a young lady has no escort to a party, ball, concert, or other entertainment she wishes to attend, she may ask her affianced husband or some intimate gentleman friend to accompany her. If any expense is to be incurred she should purchase tickets and enclose them in her note requesting the gentleman to act as her escort.

Flowers, bon bons, or an inexpensive book, are the only gifts a young lady can with propriety receive from a gentleman who is nothing more to her than a friend.
