WASHINGTON:
EDUCATION IN THE SENATE.

MISSOURI QUESTION.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 17.

[Recapitulation.]

Mr. Elliott, of Georgia, said, with a knowledge of the talents which would be called forth at the bar of the Senate, as a result of the present adjournment, he wished to make some remarks on the subject of education, in the hope of promoting the general instruction of the country.

He believed that the Senate was well aware of the importance of education. He had long been a advocate of the system of free schools, and he was happy to see that it was now the fashion to promote the education of the people. He could not help observing, however, that the system of education was not uniform throughout the country.

He was aware that the Federal government had established a system of education, and that it was now the business of the states to carry it into execution. He thought that the states should be encouraged to establish a system of education, and that the Federal government should be enabled to aid them in the execution of the laws.

This, Mr. Elliott said, was the opinion of the advocates of education throughout the country. He knew that the Senate would do nothing to retard the progress of education, and that it would do all in its power to promote it.
